Mobile Video Surveillance and Fleet Management Report - 2023

Covering video surveillance systems in public transportation vehicles and fleet management solutions.

The mobile video surveillance market is growing, with rising demand from many verticals finding new motivations for security and safety for occupants, drivers and the wider public. Companies, governments and transport authorities are increasingly looking to this technology to offer them protection from terrorism, theft, fraud and vandalism.

Historically, the primary motivation for commercial mobile video surveillance systems was to protect the safety and security of passengers, drivers, and other staff. However, as systems have become more intelligent and budgets have become smaller, transit agencies and fleet managers are now interested in features that can provide clear, quantifiable return on investment.

This will be the eighth edition of the mobile video surveillance report.
