METHODOLOGY

Spending estimates were prepared using systems revenue and/or unit data and applying semiconductor content ratios to the data. These ratios were obtained from the Omdia Application Market Forecast Tool and various other research methods including examining bill-of-materials and teardowns. The assumptions were further fine-tuned based on the product mix and design preference of the individual OEM/Brand. This initial model data was then augmented by input on spending from the OEM/Brand themselves, suppliers, or other industry sources.

SEMICONDUCTOR SPEND ESTIMATES

Omdia used its extensive databases on semiconductor content of various system types as the primary first pass method of determining the chip spend by account. These numbers were then modified by various research methods. Omdia analysts who are experts in systems markets, EMS/ODM outsourcing, and semiconductor devices were also utilized to ensure quality.

HOW ‘SPENDING’ IS DEFINED

An OEM/Brand is assigned all semiconductor spending done by itself directly or indirectly through an EMS or ODM who buys chips on behalf of the OEM/Brand. To avoid double counting the only spending by ODMs included in this study is that for its own brand.

CAPTIVE INTERNAL SALES

For those companies that operate as both OEM and semiconductor supplier, every effort has been made to calculate net spending only for those devices originating from the external merchant market. Net spend does not include internally sourced products that could be classified as intersegment sales.
